Five Gray Stone Tech (China)

I co-founded and managed a web company with a group of colleagues, where our primary focus was to develop advertising platforms and websites to help local stores and small shops promote their products and locations. As a member of the development team, my role was to create the frontend of these platforms and websites using HTML, CSS, JavaScript, and React. Additionally, I contributed to the development of backend applications using .NET and Node.js, and I also played a role in building backend services. Through my work at the company, I gained experience in both frontend and backend development, as well as collaborating with others to build effective solutions for our clients.
